WEEK 5: i learn

INTRODUCTION & OPENING QUESTION

There are so many opinions in this world about what we should be living our lives for or how we should be defining ourselves. During this series, we are going to explore what it truly means to be a Jesus-follower. This week we are talking about learning. In your small group, you will unpack what it means to let Jesus teach us how to live, and discuss what it looks like to learn from Him.

Share about an experience you've had with a great teacher.

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS

- 1) What are some misconceptions people might have about receiving instruction from Jesus on how to live?
- 2) As it pertains to your faith, where are you (or where have you been) getting your "training?"
- 3) Pastor Jonathan suggested that maybe we need "start fresh" in regards to how we learn. What might that look like for you?
- 4) Jesus' teachings require his followers to be prepared to live radically different. Practically, what would that look like for you this week?
- 5) Jesus said: "take up your cross daily," suggesting that we are to remain humble and curious about what we could learn on a daily basis from Him. How does a posture like that impact your daily life?

As we focus on learning this week, consider reading through the book of Matthew or one of the gospels together as a group, focusing on the words of Jesus and the ways he instructed his followers to live.

TAKEAWAYS

- 1) What is your biggest takeaway from this weekend's message? Why?
- 2) Take some time to read, write down, and commit to memory Matthew 11:28-30.
- 3) Identify someone in your life who is "weary and heavy burdened." Write down their name, and commit to praying and encouraging them this week. Consider sharing this weeks message with them!
